All I can say is, why hasn't this film been opted for a television series yet? I want more!

GIRL WITH GUN stars the gorgeous Tracy O'Connor as Gwen Hunter. In this short film by RUSS EMANUEL, Gwen (AKA in the crime fighting underworld as "The Nightingale") is a female assassin on the side of good. She a woman trying to balance two very different lives: one as a teddy bear-loving sweetheart, and the other as the protector of innocence and justice.

In the beginning of the short, we can see that The Nightingale is not someone to be messed with. She is feared by the criminals and the like throughout the city. After we see Gwen kick some major butt by mercilessly defeating a drug dealer, we are taken into her other, more "normal" life. We see Gwen chatting it up with her best friend Mitzi and pondering her own relationship status with her on-and-off boyfriend Dan.

Just as she tries to decide to settle down more with Dan over some Thai lunch, Gwen gets word of some evil afoot. She randomly excuses herself from the table, leaving Dan to wonder "What is wrong with my girlfriend?"

A fight takes place outside of the restaurant in the alley between The Nightengale and her arch-nemesis "Ninja Girl." The fight scene is extremely well done. Emanuel does a superb job directing the choreography, and perfectly peppers it with very humors cut scenes back to Dan sitting in the restaurant.

After the fight, we see that Gwen is very torn; can she keep her identity as The Nightingale secret from everyone much longer? Is her relationship with Dan ever going to last due to her super hero alter ego? Within this 14 minute short, once the credits start rolling, you want to see more. You already care about the characters and look forward to future episodes/full feature length film.

All in all Russ Emanuel did a superb job with the film. He elicits the best performance out of his actors, and with the soundtrack by Neil Argo, this film is a must see. Also, the original song "Fallen" by Jenni Alpert is mesmerizing and compliments the theme of the film very well.
